MOB WAITS ON JUDGE

Negro Will Be Lynched if Not Tried at Once.

Nashville, Tenn., April 16.—A dispatch from Verona, Tex., says that Isom Boyd, a half-witted negro, met Allen Reynold, a prominent young white man, in the road, took his gun from him and shot the top of his head off. The negro was arrested and placed in jail. A mob soon gathered, and told the Sheriff if the negro was not tried at once he would be lynched. Judge Richardson has the matter under advisement, and the mob is now waiting on his decision.

MORE ABOUT PIONEERS FORGOTTEN.

Some Have Descendants Still Living In The City.

McGARVEY BROTHERS.

Several Prominent In Early Church Work In Hopkinsville.

Another article is here given containing brief sketches of some of the pioneers buried in the old Westside Cemetery. The next article will discuss the original owner of the ground upon which Hopkinsville was laid out. One or two more will conclude the series.

Bradley.

Robt. S. Bradley and his wife, Mrs. Louisa E. Bradley, died one in 1836, the other date is effaced. They were the parents of Mrs. Bob Ellis, who still lives in this city with three of her children, Mr. Jno. G. Ellis, Mrs. L. H. McKee and Miss Jimmie Ellis.

Dallam.

Francis M. Dallam, who died in 1828, when 68 years of age, was one of the city's earliest settlers. His wife, Sarah, sleeps beside him. They reared a large family, many of whom attained prominence. Nathan S. Dallam, whose relationship to Francis is not known, was the second circuit court clerk of the county. He was probably the pioneer Dallam's son. The family is no longer represented here. One branch of it became prominent at Henderson and Clarence Dallam, a talented young lawyer, now lives in Louisville. Francis M. Dallam was 22 years old when the Revolutionary war began and in all probability was a soldier. He was a charter member of the first Masonic Lodge chartered in this part of Kentucky in 1816 and so was Nathan S. Dallam.

Eggleton.

Benjamin Eggleton, who died in 1819, was one of the very earliest citizens of the infant county. He was here prior to 1804 when the name of the town was changed from Elizabeth to Hopkinsville. His name frequently occurs in the early records of the county, but no one here remembers anything about him. The Eggletons here now came in recent years and they are not descendants of the pioneer of that name.

English.

On the south side of the cemetery is a well-preserved headstone of Jonathan English, who died 53 years ago. Nobody here now remembers him at all and if he has descendants they are in other localities. At the time he died he was 56 years old. His tomb sets forth that he married Jane Moore, daughter of David Moore, Sept. 6, 1848, a few years before he died. That he professed religion in 1823 and was an elder in the Presbyterian church to the time of his death.

Hopkins.

In the southeast corner of the grounds is the grave of Miss Ruth Hopkins, who died in 1834 at the age of 62 years. Near by are the graves of Thomas Hopkins and Mrs. Jane Hopkins, consort of John Hopkins. They all died more than 70 years ago. Nothing is now known of them. The city of Hopkinsville was named in honor of Gen. Stephen Hopkins in 1804. The Hopkins family here then may have been his kindred. There is still a Thomas Hopkins in this county, but he is a native of Ireland.

McGarvey.

Two brothers, John and William Alexander McGarvey, were buried side by side and their graves were covered with old-fashioned boxed tombs, with inscriptions cut on the top. Parts of these still remain, that of John McGarvey being the better preserved. They were the only sons of their father and were born in Tamny, north of Ireland, and came to America together when quite young. They were Protestant Irish and were proud of the orange ribbon. William A. McGarvey married a Miss Moore, of Hopkinsville, but died young and left a widow and one son, John William Alexander McGarvey. The latter was well known in Hopkinsville for many years as Alex. McGarvey, but spent his last years in Memphis, where two of his daughters—Mrs. Browne and Miss Aleck McGarvey—still reside.

John McGarvey married Sallie Ann Thompson, of Christian county, an aunt of G. C., E. B. and T. W. Long, and died when 33 years of age, leaving one son, John William, and three daughters, Sarah, Nancy and Mary. Mary married Thomas D. Haley, now a distinguished preacher of Kansas City, Mo., where she died, leaving three sons and two daughters. Nancy married Dr. Hiram Christopher, of St. Louis, who spent his later years in St. Joseph, Mo., where both died, leaving three daughters. Sarah married Thomas S. Parker, a merchant of Sedalia, Mo. Both are still living and have made their home for several years in Pueblo, Colo. The son, John William McGarvey, is still living and is 76 years of age. He is President of the "College of the Bible" in Lexington, Ky., and has been a professor in that institution since 1865. He is also a preacher of marked ability in the Christian church and author of several noted religious works, of which are "McGarvey's Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles," his "Commentaries on Matthew and Mark" and "Lands of the Bible." The latter is considered one of the most accurate and reliable works of the kind now extant. We are indebted to Dr. McGarvey for the material contained in this sketch.

Parrish.

One of the prominent men of sixty years ago, who sleeps in an unmarked grave, was Samuel Parrish, an uncle of Dr. R. W. Ware. He married a sister of Samuel Murrell, of Louisville. Dr. Ware was present at his burial when he was a boy. A monument was erected, but it has long since disappeared. Samuel Parrish was a wealthy man and owned a sugar plantation in Louisiana. He was taken with consumption and was on a boat in the Mississippi river, en route to Cuba, when he died. His body was brought back to Hopkinsville for burial. It was taken to a residence on what is now North Virginia street and as there were no hearses in those days, it was carried through the streets nearly a mile by six pall-bearers with sticks under the casket. Mr. Parrish left only one daughter, Miss Ella Parrish, who afterwards became the wife of Charlie McCarty. The daughter died young and left no descendants.

Pursley.

Near the center of the lot was buried in 1827 John Pursley, who was born in 1774. He was one of the earliest pioneers who came to Hopkinsville. He was a stone mason and helped to build the first brick house erected in the infant city. He was a shrewd trader and accumulated considerable property. The county history says he was a very large and fleshy man and spoke with a peculiar drawing tone. The present Baptist church with a membership of 600 was organized at his house, which was near the present bridge on the Canton pike, on June 6, 1818. There were ten members. Mr. Pursley was a prominent and active member until his death nine years later. His grandson, John W. Pursley is still here a useful member of the church organized in his grandfather's house.

Kinhead.

Several members of the Kinhead family are buried in the cemetery, some as late as 1858. Mrs. Susan Kinhead was a daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Allen. Mrs. Virginia Kinhead was a daughter of Mr. Morris and was the wife of Joseph D. Kinhead. She died in 1838. Mr. Kinhead was an uncle of Mr. Henry C. Gant and his deceased brother, Joseph Kinhead Gant.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Mr. John T. Edmunds is at Dawson.

Mr. John P. Burnett spent Sunday in the city.

Mrs. B. G. Nelson is visiting her parents, in New Providence, Tennessee.

Judge Wallace Hancock, of Cadiz, was here Sunday, on a visit to parents.

Dr. T. L. Bacon and wife have returned from a visit to relatives at Roaring Spring.

Mr. J. M. Tinsley has moved his family to Madisonville, where they will make their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Clark, of Morganfield, have moved to Hopkinsville where they will reside in the future.—Princeton Leader.

Mrs. W. B. Kennedy and children have returned from a visit to the family of Mr. G. W. Elgin, at Madisonville.

Judge M. D. Brown, of Madisonville, was here yesterday, and went to Clarksville this morning on business.

Mrs. Gus T. Brannon and two little sons, of Owensboro, are here on a visit to Prof. and Mrs. J. G. Bramham, Mrs. Brannon's parents. They will remain several weeks.

Mr. W. C. White and Miss Mildred Wharton, of Trigg county, left yesterday for Louisville with Miss Susie Cooper, the latter's niece, who will be operated upon for appendicitis.

Misses Dixie and Cornie Bass came over from Nashville Saturday and were the guests of the Misses Goldthwaite until this morning. They are at school in Nashville. Their father, Mr. O. L. Bass, of Pensacola, Fla., is also in the city.

Mr. Frank Hoge left Saturday for Lima, Ohio, and will visit Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Columbus and St. Mary's, Ohio, going over the Ideal Construction Company's properties on an annual inspection. He will be back in about two weeks.

Mr. W. E. Mitchell, who has been living at Sturgis, Ky., for the past two years, has moved his family to this city and is occupying one of the West cottages on West Nineteenth street. Mr. Mitchell formerly lived in Hopkinsville, but was engaged in business at Herndon, in South Christian, for several years previous to his removal to Union county. The family have many friends here who will extend them a glad welcome back to their old home. Mr. Mitchell will again work for the Forbes Manufacturing Co.

At Taylor's Bluff.

Messrs. J. E. McPherson, John Ellis and A. W. Wood, of this city, and W. A. Glass and F. W. McRae, of South Christian, went to Taylor's Bluff, on Little river, just below Pee Dee, to spend a week fishing.
